Gregor JAKUBOWSKI

The style, method and themes of Gregor JAKUBOWSKI's paintings, follow the moods of the turn of the century decadent, symbolist, and aesthetic art and literary movements, rather than the contemporary world. In his early years, he used fine, decorative and sinuous outline to describe the forms of the subjects of his paintings.

A kind of unique, reflective melancholy developed.

The energetic lines and etchings of the artist, similar to China ink pen drawings, superpose nervous line to the decorative, almost uniform surface of color in the painting. One is often reminded of Schiele or Klimt.

The figures in the symbolic paintings of Gregor Jakubowski inhabit their own dreamlike space. Jakubowski's mastery of anatomy is emphasized by his unique way of combining linearism with subdued areas of color to create a synthesis of drawn and painterly elements. His compositions are marked by a somber grace that dignifies the human figure, even while their anatomical fragmentation may suggest the transient nature of the flesh.

Another inspiration of Gregor Jakubowski is related to his artistic and emotional attachment to the horse, and to the lifestyle surrounding horse riding. The artist begins his paintings with a general plastic conception of composition, light, shade and color, and only then proceeds to a more detailed description of his subject. This way, his paintings are full of dynamic movement and of a sort of agitation, which seemed to better capture how horses carry themselves.

Grzegorz JAKUBOWSKI's art doesn't lack what is so liked by the connoisseurs - the soft, painterly brushwork, shimmering light, transfused forms and blended contrasts, rich and luminous colour, vibrant shadows and movement. In other words it has all that makes a painting an object of aesthetic value. The characteristic, aggressive line becomes an expressive ornament in the style of Art Nouveau, which brings to mind flickering flames or a quivering, intricate, lace-like structure. The heroes of particular compositions are unsettlingly beautiful, elegant, and quiet, even though the world of the luminous webs and intricate ornament apparently threatens them, engulfs and blurs the outline of their bodies, leading to decomposition and obliteration.

Jakubowski speaks with caressing whisper. His works combine specific, mysterious aura with a mood of poetic contemplation, though the lyricism is not devoid of apocalyptic accent but individual compositions lose nothing of their decorativeness and beauty...
